

New tonic water adds sparkle to drinks list

LONDON'S top restaurants are picking a new "natural" tonic water in preference to mainstream brands in an effort to reinvigorate their drinks menus. Venues such as Nobu and The Ivy have ditched their traditional mixer in favour of Fever Tree — a preservative-free tonic which contains quinine from the Rwanda/Congo border, as well as natural botanical flavours — instead of Schweppes or Britvic.